HONGKONG'S PROPOSED
UNIVERSITY.

Lord William Cecil opposes Secular Education.

In the course of a letter to the Daily Express, Lord William Cecil says:—
The Western educator of the Far East, if he is not a missionary, believes in education without religion. Irreligious education is in full swing at Tokyo; the Germans are going to start another non-religious university at Shanghai; some people say the English university at Hongkong is going to be non-religious, but I hope wiser counsels will prevail and, at any rate, religious hotels in connection with the university will be permitted. It makes one and to think of poor China, with these three great universities hard at work turning out, not good Confucians, good Buddhists, good Jews, or good Christians, but just producing men without faith and therefore without principle, without truth, and without honesty, who shall go throughout the length and breadth of China making the name of the West odious to all right-minded men. Certainly Western civilization without Christianity is like Hamlet with Hamlet left out. All its ideals are Christian, and it is an unreasonable system unless you accept a Christian basis for your thought. Every Western thinker, even those who profess unbelief, has lived in an atmosphere of Christian thought. A Shanghai newspaper said the other day that it wanted a Chinese Howard to reform Chinese prisons. Would Howard ever have reformed the prisons if he had not been a Christian? Would Wilberforce have freed the slaves if he had been educated at Tokyo or at Shanghai Universities?

I hear that the prospectus of the Hongkong University speaks of making special effort to build up character; but how? I understand it is to be without religion, certainly without Christ. Truly, this is making bricks without straw; nay, without clay as well. How is it to be done? I suppose the master is to tell his pupils that they must be good. But will that have any result? Why, China is a living proof to the contrary. If every Chinese ruler ever thought of keeping the excellent maxims that were written by Confucius, and that are learnt by heart by every educated Chinese boy, China would be an ideal country. Chinese morality is as low as its culture is high. It is a standing example of the uselessness of good advice. Yet the same old plan is to be tried again, in spite of its obvious failure; only the authority on which the good advice rests is to be largely diminished: the teacher is not to say, "This advice comes down to you from Confucius, and has been respected by your fathers"; but he is to say, if he tells the truth: "The good advice I give you is a mere invention of a few theorists; it has never obtained acceptance in the West except in France, and there its results are injurious; so we are going to try it in the East."

Poor China is to share in that experiment which is proving such a failure in Japan and India—of education without religion, of morality without faith. Has such a course made high-minded men in the West, and can such a course make high-minded men in the East? What China wants at the present day is high-minded men. Can you be high-minded without religion? Those interested in the well-being of China are meditating sorrowfully on this question; this is especially true of the missionaries. Many have lived for years in discomfort and danger, many have died from pestilential climates or by the sword. They think little about such matters. They are only anxious for the future of those for whom they have lived and suffered. Many mission bodies have erected splendid schools. What will be the fate of the pupils of these schools? The Chinese learn readily, and some of the bright boys in these mission schools have great futures before them if they can only get a good university education. But what will be their fate if they fall into the hands of some unbelieving professor of science who will persuade them that all they have learned is wrong? This condition will be worse than if they had never heard of Christianity or Western education.

AN EXPERT'S OPINION.

Lord Pirbright, head of the great British shipbuilding firm of Harland and Wolff, has been confiding to Mr.

Harold Spender, the well-known London journalist, a few ideas on the present situation. His Lordship's opinions are well worth the attention of all interested in the welfare of the empire for he is a man engaged in large enterprises and views events from the standpoint of one who has himself taken a hand in the shaping of great issues. We are not surprised to find that he thinks the naval scare in regard to Germany's probable objective in building up a big navy has been grossly exaggerated, while we notice that he does not see much reason to be surprised at the recent activity in German shipbuilding yards, or at the reported acceleration of the German Naval programme. He says:—"What acceleration there has been is, I think, quite possibly to be honestly accounted for by the explanation given on high German authority—that the ships have been put forward in order to give employment in the empty shipbuilding yards of Germany. For, of course, there has been a great depression in German shipbuilding—a greater depression, I think, on the whole, than here; and it is only natural that those yards which are empty of ships should be eager to take in hand at once the work which has to be done at some time and may as well be done now. It is one of the German methods of dealing with the unemployed problem. Of course, I may be wrong—they may of course, be deceiving us; but I do not see any absolute proof of that."

Lord Pirbright does not think that Germany can build ships faster than Great Britain but their method of giving out the orders simultaneously for ships, machinery, gun-mounts and armament being different to the British way, which is to first order the ship and then later her armament, gives an impression of greater celerity, though he admitted that as this method certainly prevents many changes of plans, it also economizes time though not so much as the outside public imagines. He was of opinion that England still could build many more Dreadnoughts than Germany, should the occasion ever arise, for there were idle private shipyards in England at the present moment which could turn out a greater number of Dreadnoughts than all the German yards put together.

Turning from naval matters to subjects connected with the mercantile marine, Lord Pirbright remarked that "the moment that wireless telegraphy was introduced, I always recognised that a new element had arrived, and that speed was not as necessary as formerly. In the old days it was otherwise. I can remember a merchant saying to me of a certain ship, "I found myself one day late in that ship—I lost 23,000 by that delay, and I shall never travel by that line again." But now-a-days a business man can sit on a ship crossing the Atlantic, can wire orders to his brokers, watch the markets, know the news—while all the time he is at sea. It is even conceivable that he may save money by staying on a ship thanks to the absence of other divar-ications. In my opinion therefore wireless changed the whole position. I have advised, indeed urged, my firm's clients to act on that theory, and I think they have found it successful." The great shipbuilder, however, was all in favour of big ships like the Lusitania and the Mauretania. He said to his interviewer in this connection:

"I am strongly in favour of having the largest possible ship that the trade for which she is intended will support, and the ports between which she will go will accommodate. The larger the ship the greater the comfort for passengers, and the more profitable she is to work. As I have already said, however, I think speed can be bought too dearly, and excessive speed necessitates subsidies, to which I have always been much opposed."

We close with one further extract dealing with the causes of the recent great depression in the shipbuilding industry. These, in Lord Pirbright's opinion, were primarily due to "the cessation of the period of great wars which lasted from 1897 right on to 1905, beginning with the Spanish-American War ending with the Russo-Japanese. During that period we had a constant demand for ships from the belligerent nations to transport men and food to the seat of war.

Liners were called off and converted into cruisers. Other ships were taken and used as food transports. There was a great diversion of ships from ordinary industry, and, in the meantime, new ships were built to take their place.

Those new ships, built during the wars to take the place of ships called off for war, are now being digested, if I may say so, by the great ship-owning companies. The process will be gradual.

As trade revives, all these ships will be wanted. Then shipbuilding will become again a prosperous industry."

President Taft on June 1st pressed at Washington the electric button which opened the gates of the Alaska-Yukon-Pacific Exposition at Seattle.

The appointment of M. P. de Margerie, French Minister in Bangkok, to succeed M. Bapst as Minister in Peking appears in the French Official Gazette.

The Bandmann Comedy Company have cancelled their South Indian tour; their leading lady, Miss Florence Hamer, being seriously ill. She has entered the St. George's Hospital, Bombay, where the doctors say she will be at least a month.

At the Theatre Royal on Saturday night in the presence of a large audience, including H.E. the Governor (Sir F. D.

Lugard) Ching Ling Foo, the Chinese magician on his way to England, gave, with the assistance of his troupe, a decidedly clever and entertaining programme. The mystifying feats of Ching Ling Foo were particularly appreciated; while the singing of his daughter made a decided impression.

LONDON, June 7.
The Imperial Press Conference has opened.

Lord Rosebury, in proposing "Our Guests" at the inaugural banquet, referred to the question of Imperial defence. He described the present situation in Europe as ominous and unprecedented. With an absolute absence of questions ordinarily leading to war, there was never so threatening or so over-powering a preparation for war. He felt confident of Great Britain's ability to meet a reasonable conjunction of Powers, but this outbursting of Navies made him feel uneasy as to the ultimate outcome. Lord Rosebury concluded, "We can and will build Dreadnoughts while we have a shilling to spend or a man to put in them."

ORDINATION AT THE CATHEDRAL.

Sermon by the Rev. E. J. Barnett, M.A.

On Sunday morning Mr. Charles Norman Rose Mackenzie was ordained deacon by the Bishop of Victoria, at St. John's Cathedral. There was a very large congregation and the Rev. E. J. Barnett, M.A., warden of St. Stephen's College, preached the sermon.

In the course of his sermon the reverend preacher said: "We are not together in this Cathedral this morning to take our solemn parts in a service, wherein one is to be admitted to the sacred office of the Ministry of the Church. This service is but one of many similar services which are being held on this, Trinity Sunday, in numerous Cathedrals in various parts of the world. As the sun this day takes its course across the heavens from East to West, so throughout the day the Church of the living God flows in its train—calling her sons, with loyal hearts and true, to devote their lives to her triumphant service, that she may be prepared for her Lord's return. You will notice in the Form for the Ordination of Deacons that the Rubric requires there shall be a sermon declaring the duty and office of such as come to be admitted to the Diaconate. In the Epistle to the Romans, the first Deacons in the infant days of the Church, the qualifications for the office required by the Apostle in Acts VI. are that deacons be (1) 'Men full of the Holy Ghost and wisdom,' (2) 'Men full of the Holy Ghost and wisdom,' (3) 'Men full of the Holy Ghost and wisdom,' (4) 'Men full of the Holy Ghost and wisdom,' (5) 'Men full of the Holy Ghost and wisdom,'
